

Private Sector Development Impact Stories

Private Sector Engagement

The Donor Committee for Enterprise Development

The DCED's Impact Stories webpage offers a collection of short stories about private sector development programmes that have created jobs and income for the poor at scale – according to self-reported results. These stories underline the great potential of the private sector to generate economic opportunities and improve the living conditions of the poor.

Impact Story: Scaling up inclusive distribution chains in East Africa – IFC and Coca Cola SABCO

Cooperation between multinational enterprises and local businesses in developing countries can offer numerous benefits for both sides, but it is an often neglected business opportunity.

What has been done? Between 1999 and 2002, Coca-Cola SABCO has piloted an innovative delivery-scheme in East Africa. The scheme aimed to integrate low-income entrepreneurs into Coca-Cola SABCO's core business operations by employing them to bring Coca-Cola products to local vendors in small, hand-pushed carts. In 2002, IFC supported Coca-Cola SABCO in expanding its operations in Ethiopia and Tanzania with $37 million in financing (comprising a $15 million loan, a $12 million guarantee, and $10 million in equity).

What has been achieved? By 2008, Coca-Cola SABCO has created over 12,000 jobs and more than $420 million in additional revenue in Ethiopia and Tanzania. Around 50,000 local people relied on income from Coca-Cola's distribution chain. Source and more information: IFC, 2011

Click here for more impact stories of Private Sector Engagement initiatives.